

Pink Floyd founding member Rick Wright dies aged 65

● Richard Wright (far left), a founding member of Pink Floyd, has died at the age of 65. Wright, who played keyboards in the group, had written tracks on classic albums such as the

Dark Side Of The Moon and Wish You Were Here. His spokesman says, "The family of Richard Wright, founder member of Pink Floyd, announce with great sadness, that Richard died today after a short struggle with cancer." Bandmate David Gilmour (pictured, second left) paid tribute to his bandmate, saying, "No one can replace Richard Wright. He was my musical partner and my friend."
